LAND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

We acknowledge the Alaska Native nations upon whose ancestral lands our campuses reside. In Fairbanks, our Troth Yeddha' Campus is located on the ancestral lands of the Dena people of the lower Tanana River.

LOOK TO UAF

Where will your journey take you? How will you make use of nearly 24 hours of daylight in the summer, and the dancing aurora in the winter? Will you use it to uncover solutions to the challenges small, global and everything in between? What will you find in the world after making friends with genuine, easygoing people in a place like no other?

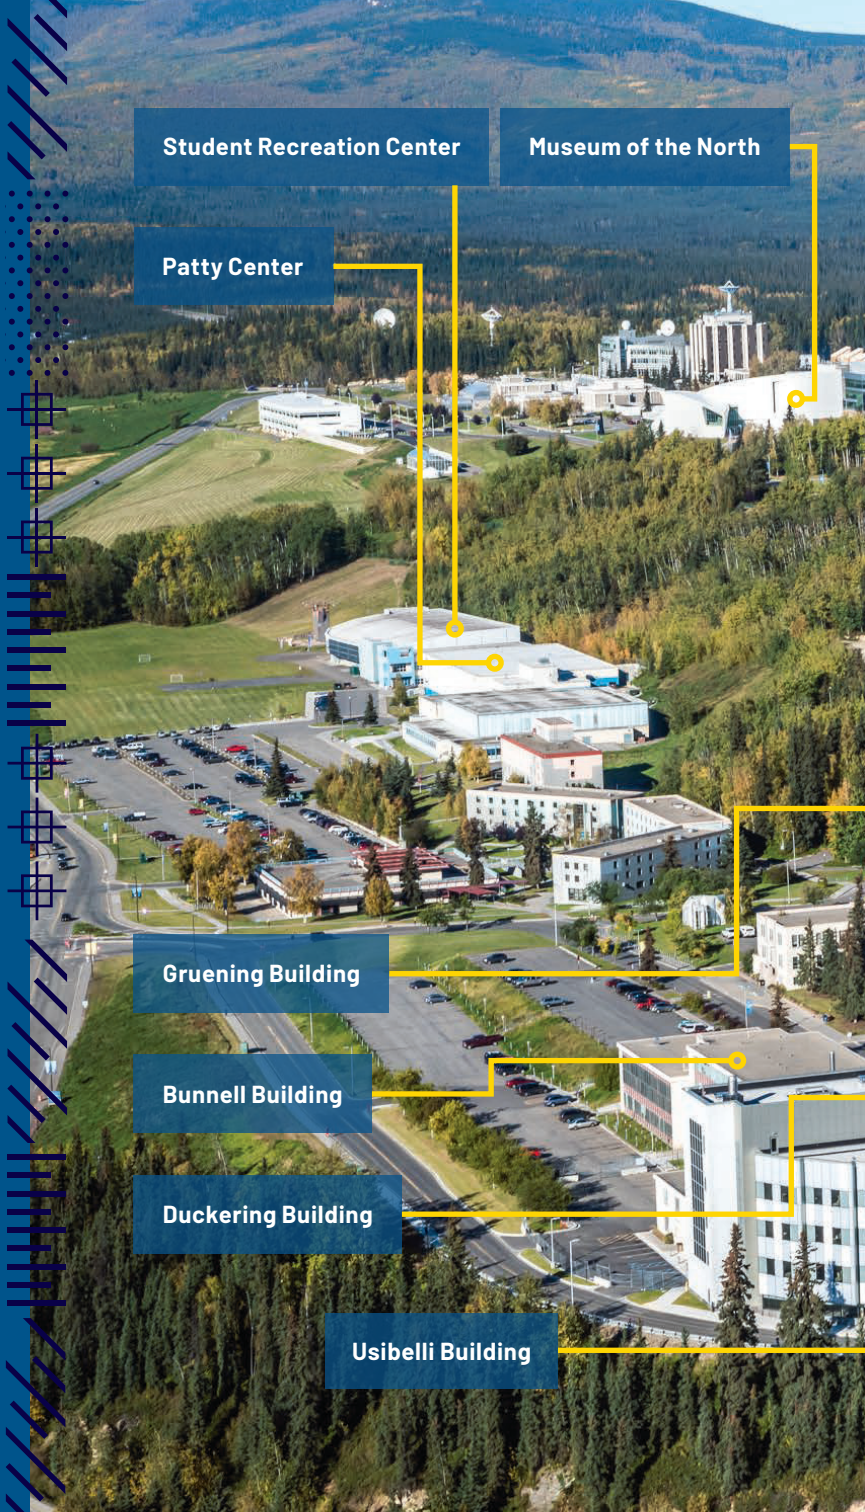

On any given day on the Troth Yeddha' Campus in Fairbanks, the state's second-largest city, you'll find more than 5,000 students. Thousands more attend online or at UAF's rural and community campuses.

FROM THE COMFORT OF HOME OR BEYOND THE BORDER

We don't think things like distance or work should get in the way of your education. Our fully online degrees allow you to work within your hectic schedule from anywhere in the world and still get a high-quality, accredited education. UAF eCampus connects students with life-changing opportunities and experiences in a supportive virtual learning environment.

Want to wander out of your comfort zone and beyond the U.S. border? Spend a summer, semester or year studying in a foreign country or in a different U.S. state, all while earning credit toward your UAF degree. You don't need to have a second language, travel experience or a limitless budget — just a sense of adventure.

Trade places with a student in Japan, Spain or a number of other countries — UAF has hundreds of exchange programs. Spend a semester studying the Arctic in Norway through the north2north mobility program. Go to your U.S. city of choice to pursue an internship or simply become immersed in an American industry. Point to a spot on the map, and we'll help you get there.

BEYOND the BOOKS

UP HERE, OUR BIGGEST CLASSROOM IS THE OUTDOORS

UAF is a world leader in climate and Arctic research, so students can spend a healthy portion of their time outside the classroom. We know a lot of schools say that — but how many have muskoxen and reindeer living right on campus in their own wildlife research station? Or a state-of-the-art research vessel to study wild orcas off Alaska's southern coast? Our Undergraduate Research and Scholarly Activity program even funds students to lead their own research and travel.

Up here, there are so many unique opportunities you can't get anywhere else. The UAF Climate Scholars Program is the first of its kind anywhere — hands-on experiences that bridge environmental science, social advocacy and global innovation, no matter what your major is.

If field research isn't your thing, UAF is also a hub for artists and creators who are inspired by Alaska's setting — shoot a short film with your classmates on the trails at 20 below, join fellow writers and poets at UAF's undergrad literary magazine or learn printmaking to capture your Alaska. At UAF, adventure is a natural ingredient of every degree program.

THE WEATHER MAY BE COOL, BUT NANOOKS ARE COOLER

Ask a UAF student about their favorite part of being a Nanook and you'll hear "the great outdoors," "the arts and music scene" or "seeing the aurora borealis." But most Nanooks also will share the same No. 1 answer — it's the people.

Your found family at UAF makes everything warmer, whether by basking together in the glow of the giant annual fall bonfire, co-hosting your own show on the college radio station or button-mashing during a Super Smash Bros. Ultimate Tournament alongside your new best buds.

NANOOKS ARE EQUIPPED FOR ANYTHING

Whether you're meeting hallmates at the gym for an intramural soccer game or packing up your friend's car to head two hours south to camp out in Denali National Park, UAF's Student Rec Center has your back. Rent a tent and cross-country skis from Outdoor Adventures before your big excursion. Even belay a friend as you climb UAF's handmade ice wall — if you're bold enough. And cap off any good school week by attending one of many live music shows at UAF's coffee shop, campus pub or music hall!

MAJOR: JUSTICE, B.A.

Brenna may be from a small Alaska town originally, but she's seen enough of the world to know that UAF is where she wants to be today. She spent six years living in Decatur, Illinois, with her family, before returning to Nome, Alaska, and graduating from Nome's high school in 2023.

"I'd already gone across the country and then came back," she said. "So I was like, 'I'm not doing that again.'"

She headed for UAF. As a justice major and Honors College scholar, she enjoys not only the campus' many activities but also its friendly vibe.

"I feel like UAF fosters that kind of intention," she said. "So then the people who come here see that, and then they also behave that way."

Brenna, whose mother was Inupiaq, said UAF's Rural Student Services office has been especially welcoming as she's moved from high school in Nome to college in Fairbanks. "It smells like your grandma's home," she said. "They always have like Native food. They always have akutaq or moose soup."

meet ELI K.

MAJOR: NATURAL RESOURCES AND ENVIRONMENT, B.S.

Four days after graduating from high school in 2020, Eli moved to Fairbanks from his childhood home in Big Lake, near Anchorage, Alaska. He had a job as a wildland firefighter but nowhere to live.

"I had a duffel bag with all my stuff in it that I would need for the summer," he said. A new co-worker gave him a spot to sleep under a bunk in a cabin. "Oh, I loved it. It was the best. I met a lot of really good friends."

That fall, he enrolled at UAF, settling on a major in natural resources with a minor in emergency management — studies that dovetail with his wildland firefighting work.

Since then, he has fought fires every summer in Alaska and Montana. The work covers his expenses, and scholarships take care of tuition.

He found that UAF was a natural fit. "You've got to be a little bit different to want to live here, right?" he said. "That makes the faculty and staff different, in a good way — they're very accepting and open."
