

Black History Month Colloquium

with Cultural Anthropologist M.C. MoHagani Magnetek

Join us for M.C. MoHagani's dynamic colloquium in honor of Black History Month! "My objective as a Cultural Anthropology PhD student at the University of Alaska Fairbanks is to take my dissertation, which I envision as ethnographic at its core, from solely a text document to both a web-based and a museum-based exhibition that shines light on the historical, cultural, and artistic contributions of African Americans in Alaska. These contributions range from artifacts located in historic archaeological records, ethnographic oral narrative collections, and archives of African American life in Alaska. My overarching goal is to produce an impactful study for the future of African American Cultural Anthropology as a whole."
