Greetings!

Welcome to the Center for Cross-Cultural Studies (CXCS) monthly newsletter. As you may know, the CXCS department offers a PhD in Indigenous Studies and an MA in Cross-Cultural Studies to students that can earn their graduate degree via distance audio-conferencing. Our faculty and staff are here to help you succeed, please contact our office at (907) 474-1902 if you have any questions.

Dr. Brower is currently the President of Iḷisaġvik College, Alaska’s only Tribal College. She has been with the College since 2007 working in External Relations, Institutional Advancement, Student Services, and Marketing. She has served as President since 2012. Prior to working for the College Dr. Brower managed an education and culture grant for the North Slope Borough for three years and worked as the Museum Curator of the Iñupiat Heritage Center.

Dr. Brower grew up in both Barrow, Alaska and in northern California practicing a subsistence lifestyle in both areas. She has a daughter, Isla, who is 5 and along with her husband, Jesse Darling, lives in Barrow, Alaska where she loves to be close to her culture and community. Brower was named one of Alaska’s Top 40 Under 40 in 2015.

Brower is active in her community in Barrow, on the North Slope and statewide. She is Board Member of the Friends of Tuzzy Library and is a co-founder of Leadership:Barrow. She serves on the Wells Fargo Community Advisory Board, serves as the Vocational/Tribal representative on the Alaska Post-secondary Access and Completion Network, serves on the Alaska Airlines Community Advisory Board, on the Foraker Group’s Operations Board, and as a Commissioner for the State of Alaska Commission on Post-secondary Education.

We are proud of our alumni!
Stay connect with the Center for Cross-Cultural Studies. Do you have an exciting career or family success story to share? We would love to feature you on our newsletter and highlight your accomplishments.

To share your story, email uaf-cxcs@alaska.edu with a paragraph of your accomplishments, your research, along with a photo.

M.A. IN CROSS-CULTURAL STUDIES

The M.A. in Cross-Cultural Studies is designed to provide graduate students from various fields of interest an opportunity to pursue in-depth study of the role and contributions of indigenous knowledge in the contemporary world.

PH.D. IN INDIGENOUS STUDIES

The PhD in Indigenous Studies trains and builds upon existing academic and research capabilities at UAF for an integrated, cross-disciplinary course of advanced graduate study consisting of a common core curriculum coupled with six thematic areas of emphasis from which students choose a concentration:

- Indigenous Knowledge
- Indigenous Language
- Research
- Leadership
- Education
- Sustainability

SCHOLARSHIP LEADERSHIP RECOGNITION

Our mission at the Department of Cross-Cultural Studies is the improvement of educational and professional development opportunities for rural Alaskans. We also serve as a forum for the examination of cross-cultural and Indigenous education and community development issues across the state, as well as the globe.

Through the interests of our students, our goal is to provide technical support and information to school districts, Native corporations, tribal governments, community organizations, and state and federal agencies serving Indigenous communities. Our Indigenous Ph.D. program is the highest Native Studies degree-granting program in the state and combined with our Cross-Cultural M.A. program, we work hard to increase the recognition of Indigenous scholarship across a range of academic disciplines to best serve our students.

Indigenous Studies Candidates Present at the National Indian Education Association

It was a privilege to represent the University of Alaska, along with Olga Skinner, at the National Indian Education Association (NIEA) gathering in Miami, Florida, in October. This year’s NIEA theme, “Building Education Nations by Amplifying Innovative Voices,” recognized the role educators and communities have in shaping the future leaders of Native education.

Olga and I, Ph.D. candidates in the UAF Indigenous Studies program, had the opportunity to share our current research following a Skype introduction by our chair, Dr. Beth Leonard. The session engaged the audience around successes and challenges in Alaska Native studies— including STEM fields and teacher preparation.

In addition to having an opportunity to present our research, the gathering was a unique chance to meet and learn from others working toward similar objectives nationwide. NIEA provided excellent professional development in Indigenous education, including K-12 and higher education initiatives, grant and advocacy reports, and innovative and encouraging ideas for sustaining language and culture.

This opportunity was a rich addition to the coursework I have received at UAF. I appreciated the support and encouragement of Dr. Beth Leonard in the workshop proposal, the UAF Cross Cultural Studies Department, especially Crystal Frank, for assisting in registration and travel, and UAF Provost Henrichs for partial funding to make this experience possible.

Alaska Native Knowledge Network Brown Bag Luncheon Series

This month’s Brown Bag Seminar is planned for Nov. 29 at Noon Alaska time. We are planning to discuss writing up a projection description, turning that into a more formal research proposal, and then using it to find funding in order to carry out your research. So, wherever you are in your research journey… please join us to share your experiences and resources while we learn from each other!

In case you missed last month’s meeting… we discussed committees, who can be on them, and how to form one. Afterward we put together this Google Document listing the main UAF departments our students often work with, as well as potential faculty within each department that could serve on PhD committees. It is not a comprehensive document and by no means list out all the potential people that could potentially serve a committee, but it should get you started!

2017 Major Mania

The Center for Cross-Cultural Studies decided to participate in Major Mania this year. It was a blast to participate and speak with prospective students. Thank you to the Major Mania staff for putting on such a great event this year and for inviting us. In the photo is Crystal Frank, the Graduate Student and Administration Coordinator for CLA and Center for Cross-Cultural Studies and Professor Ray Barnhardt who stopped by to say, "hello."
Network Weaving: Moving your research to practice for community well-being

The Center for Cross Cultural studies is offering a new Spring 2018 course next semester... Network Weaving: Moving your research to practice for community wellbeing.

This is an interdisciplinary course that examines social and environmental change from a communication network perspective with a focus on Alaska-based systems. The course addresses the role of academic research as a form of organizational leadership in strengthening community resilience during times of rapid change. Course activities focus on the role individual researchers play in system change at the community level and how they may strengthen the relationship between the results of their work and improved community wellbeing. This is an action-based course and students are expected to apply course concepts and the results of their class activities directly to their own research domains. This course is designed to meet the needs of students interested in the Leadership emphasis area of the Center for Cross-Cultural Studies Indigenous Studies PhD program. However, the course is applicable to any student engaged in research that ultimately seeks to improve community wellbeing and/or resilience. It is particularly well suited to those interested in educational reform and sustainability issues.

Course objectives
- Define systems and system change from a dynamic network perspective.
- Identify important leadership and functional roles within a changing system using principles from resilience and communication studies.
- Map a variety of systems (based on students individual research needs) using social network analysis tools.
- Develop and begin initial implementation of an adaptive communication strategy to positively influence the system of choice through the ways in which students engage in their research.

Upon successful completion of course students will be able to:
- Understand the system their research is embedded in through a communication network perspective.
- Understand the value-based outcomes desired as a result of conducting their research.
- Apply social network analysis tools to map the communication network of their research domain.
- Use the results from network maps to develop and implement a communication strategy designed to support positive change as a result of their work.
