About the Museum

The Alaska Territorial Legislature included a museum in the charter for the University of Alaska in 1917, making the University of Alaska Museum of the North a part of the university system from the very beginning. The museum offered its first exhibit in 1929 – a collection of ethnographic, archaeological and paleontological material collected by local naturalist Otto Geist along with the University’s small collection of paintings.

Over the years, the museum collections grew through field acquisitions, donations and the transfer of collections from other institutions. Today, the museum is the premier repository for artifacts and specimens collected in Alaska and a leader in northern natural and cultural history research. The museum’s exhibits and public programs enrich the lives of community members and visitors alike.

 The University of Alaska Museum of the North is a wheelchair accessible facility. Designated parking is available near the museum entrance.

The museum’s exhibits and programs are supported by

The Place Where You Go to Listen

Experience this ever-changing sound and light environment created by Fairbanks composer John Luther Adams, the 2014 Pulitzer Prize winner for music. The installation is driven by real-time environmental conditions, including the position of the sun and moon, earthquake activity and the aurora.

Family Room

Relax on our comfy couches, enjoy puzzles and games for children and families, and explore our multimedia resources in this space.

Gallery of Alaska

Award-winning exhibits give visitors an introduction to this vast and diverse state. Exhibits focus on the cultures, wildlife, geography and history of each of Alaska's five major geographic regions. Highlights include Alaska's largest public display of gold, videos on the aurora, extensive displays on Alaska Native culture and Blue Babe, the world's only mummified steppe bison on exhibit.

Arnold Espe Auditorium

The museum offers Dynamic Aurora and other movies several times daily. Movie passes are available for an additional charge at the admission desk.

Special Exhibits and Collections Galleries

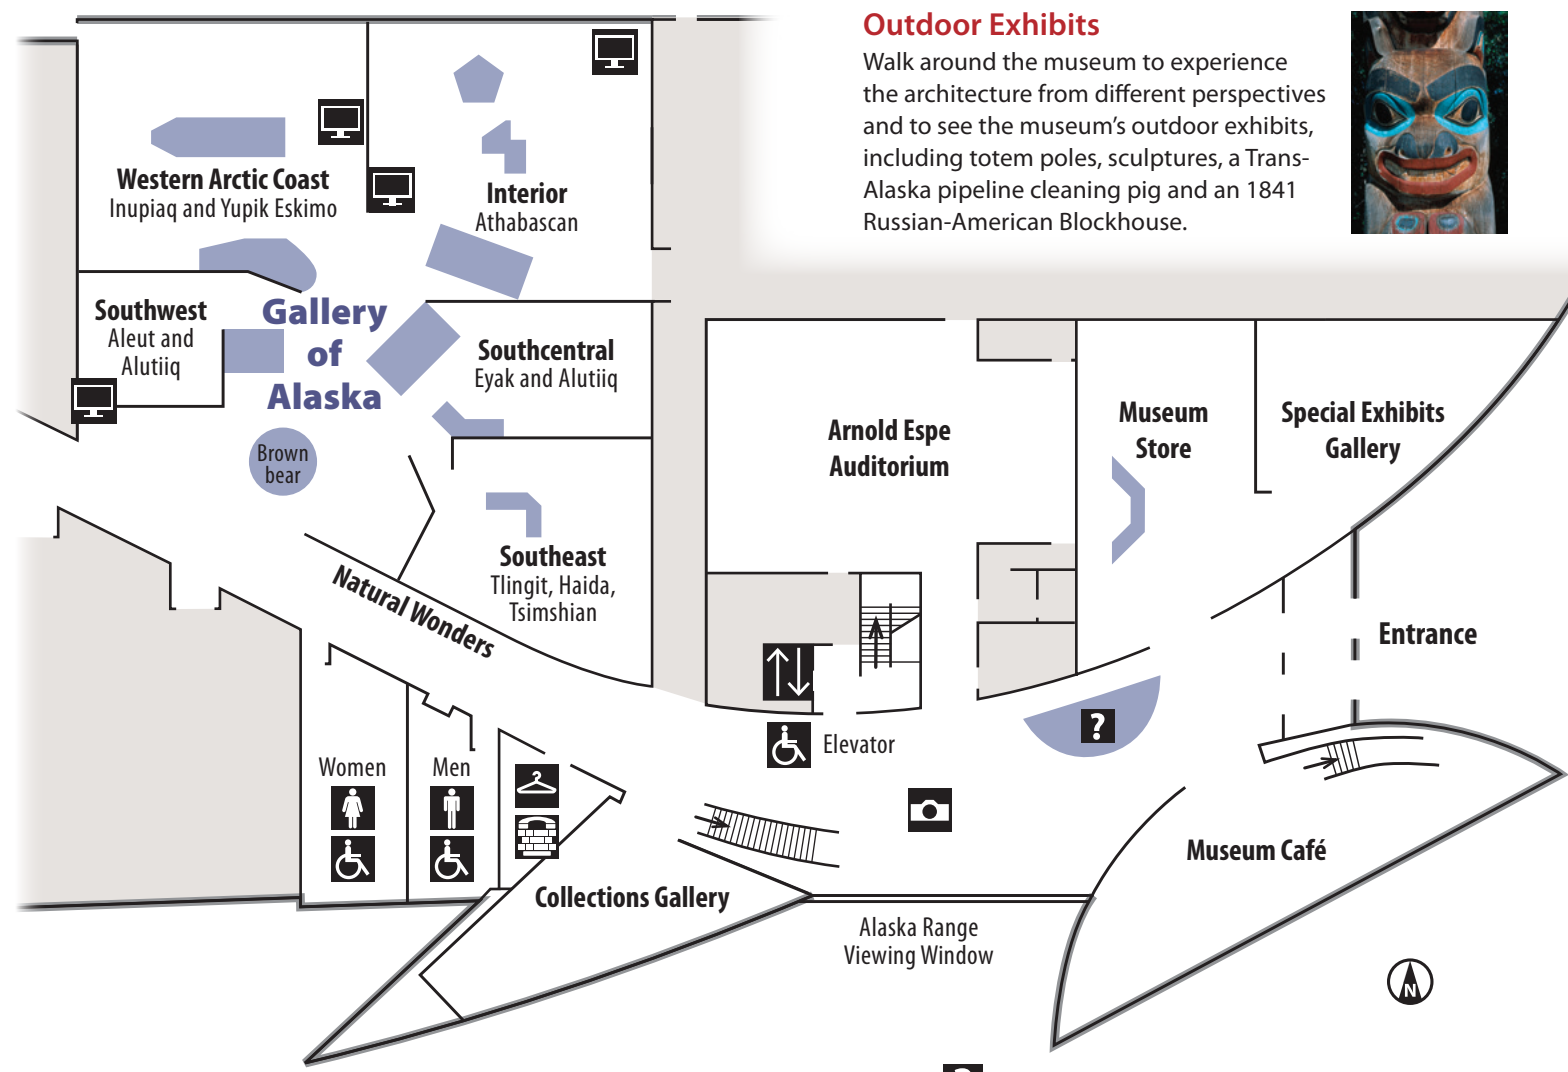

The museum offers a variety of short-term exhibits throughout the year. Recent special exhibits include Polar Passion and Expedition Alaska: Dinosaurs. A second rotating display offers a unique look at artifacts, objects and specimens from the museum's collections and elsewhere.

Museum Store

Shop for a wide variety of handmade Alaska Native art, books, videos, jewelry and other fine Alaskan gifts. Proceeds support the museum's exhibits, research and education programs.

If you have any questions or need assistance, please ask a Museum Attendant at the admission desk or in the exhibit galleries.

Outdoor Exhibits

Walk around the museum to experience the architecture from different perspectives and to see the museum's outdoor exhibits, including totem poles, sculptures, a Trans-Alaska pipeline cleaning pig and an 1841 Russian-American Blockhouse.
