As this student population frequently goes into high value jobs related to our national security, these individuals possess unique skills and abilities from training, education and the experiences they have encountered in terms of force protection, security, training, exercises and leadership. This background in short, provides for the basis of a military security studies minor and provides them credit which could applied towards earning their degree at UAF.

Include information on the Programs/Departments contacted (e.g., email, memo)

It is anticipated there may be minor growth in class size for HSEM course enrollment.

F. PERSONNEL DIRECTLY INVOLVED WITH THE MINOR:

List faculty currently teaching the required and elective (if any) courses, with a brief statement of duties and qualifications.

As a designated "Military Friendly Institution", providing a minor in military security studies would meet student demand for a method in which to apply the credits they have earned through their military education and service to a program that furthers their career objectives. This is an excellent way to honor the service of our military and veteran students and build productive partnerships with the active service members and veterans in Alaska and our community.
